

Tradition comes alive in the hands of the new generation!

Marios Patsias through the “tsiattisto” he wrote for the 1st International Creative Event, sends the message that change needs collaboration, exactly the same message that CSTI is sending and also the UN through Goal 17.

" But the master of the good ones is not the chore, no one can make it alone; Cooperation is needed.”

The poem was recited by Marina Chrysi in her own unique way.

Since 2011, 'tsattista' has been registered on the UNESCO Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity.

Enjoy the 'tsattisto':

One day, poverty, expense, and hunger went out asking who is responsible for them.

They went around trying to find the wisest in the world, wishing to learn what the cure is.

If this wise person exists, come here, in front of me.

They can't stand watching this disaster, even if they know that the blame is theirs. But who is going to rid them?

Who managed to see far beyond on this planet? To eliminate the bad things and change the situation?

Who is the strong one, who has the courage to put lines in everything and share the difficult situations?

So that every human can have dignity, access, and rights in justice, water, food, medicine, and love. So that we can give to our planet what we have stolen from it.

Please take everything that we have learned, along with all inventions, and try to fit us all in a clean world.

Our hope is to make our experience and learning a sustainable start, to leave the planet alone so we can also get rest.

To exchange words with our fellow human beings and to laugh together. But the master of the good ones Is not the chore, no one can make it alone; Cooperation is needed.
